In the case of pitavastatin acid, sulforaphane had no significant effect on the expression of MDR1 mRNA. These results suggested that some statins could induce MDR1 and CYP3A gene expression and these inductive effects differed between the lactone and active hydroxy acid forms, and that PXR-mediated regulation was rarely associated with the mRNA inducibility by pitavastatin acid, unlike that by other statins.

So why do we have Gad running an erection-stricken Gyllenhaal to the hospital from a sex party at the hippest house in the middle of freakin' Ohio? Should we be thankful that we're deprived of Jamie's inevitable moral awakening, or disappointed that a potentially savage takedown of Big Pharma just went out the window? (Azaria and Oliver Platt, as Jamie's mentor, each have their big moment of conscience before being shuffled out of the picture.)
